

ENCOUNTER HARDSHIPS UPON LEAVING EUROPE

Letter From Mrs. James B. Harvie, of Richmond, Narrates Trials Endured Quitting War Zone.

IS NOW SAFE IN NEW YORK

Party Touring Austrian Tyrol When Hostilities Break Out, and Alarm Felt When Terrible Excitement Is Noticed Among Natives.

An interesting letter narrating the terrible trials endured in getting out of Europe after three-fourths of the Continent had become engaged in war, was received yesterday from Mrs. James B. Harvie, of 12 South Third Street, who is now at 555 West One Hundredth and Sixty-sixth Street, New York City, visiting her son-in-law, Charles M. Graves, of the editorial department of the New York Times.

Mrs. Harvie and several friends were in the Austrian Tyrol when war broke out between Austria and Serbia, but were not alarmed until they noticed the terrible excitement of the Austrians. Then, like thousands of others, they determined to leave at once. Arriving at a railroad station in Zell they found hundreds of other tourists there ahead of them. In Zell they had met their daughter and a party, and there were twelve altogether when they left. They had to travel third-class and tip the conductor a dollar to do that, and finally arrived in Zurich. In Zurich the difficulties were repeated and exaggerated.

ADVISED TO GET AWAY

At 5:00 P. M. AS POSSIBLE, they were unable to get money, and would have found themselves in dire straits, but for the chance meeting with a friend who lent them enough money to take them as far as Lucerne. Everywhere they had to get passports, which had to be viced in every city through which they passed. In Lucerne they met Major Lawton, of the American government, who held a meeting of all the tourists and advised them to get away as fast as possible via France and England. Here again they had to have their passports viced, and finally after much delay, during which they witnessed scenes of extraordinary excitement and distress, they got a train for Paris. They were dressed as they had left their fields. Some of them had not had time in which to say a farewell to their families.

THE FRENCH CAPITAL, LIKE COMMUNITY OF DEAD. When the Harvies and their party arrived in Paris they found the once gay city like a community of the dead. Gone were the light-hearted crowds. People trod with heavy feet, and their faces were lined with the sober dread of war. Though it was impossible to leave Paris at the moment, they had to go to the Palace de Justice to have their passports viced and to obtain leave to remain forty-eight hours.

It was on August 22 that they left the French capital, but even on this last lap through the war devastated country they had more delay. At Amiens they were stopped by the British troops, the train halting through from Boulogne. From 11 o'clock P. M. until 4:30 o'clock A. M. they waited, watching the British soldiers passing through on their way to the front.

There were no seats with thousands of others they piled themselves on top of trunks and other pieces of baggage, and endeavored to snatch a few moments' sleep. Behind the troop trains came flat cars bearing cannon and caissons, Red Cross ambulances and other vehicular paraphernalia for the destruction and saving of men. And everywhere the French people were acclaiming their allies from across the Channel, so that the crowded station resembled itself a formal line of battle.

When their own train finally came it was already half-packed, but somehow they climbed aboard, and slowly the train crept to Boulogne, from where they took ship to Folkestone. On the way they passed British transports bringing still more soldiers, and at the mouth of the Channel they saw British battleships drawn up in a semicircle—silent watchers of the deep.

It was with a glad hurrah that they debarked in Folkestone, and with greater joy that they landed in London. Thence on the days and ways were filled with peace, and after five days in London they went to Scotland for a week, leaving England on September 5.

FREE DISPENSARY CAN CARE FOR 50,000 YEARLY

Important Plans for Great Work Are Projected by Medical College of Virginia.

NO CHARGE WHATEVER MADE

Task of Organizing One of Large Proportions—Faculty Committee Has Supervision, but Management in Hands of Superintendent.

Important plans for the further development of the work of the great free dispensary of the Medical College of Virginia as a result of which it will now be able to handle 50,000 cases annually have recently been projected and will be of more than ordinary interest to the entire city, and more especially to that portion of it afflicted with minor ills, including slender means.

At the Virginia Hospital and the associated colored hospital, on the old City Home property, the municipality is now splendidly providing for the sick and injured who are seriously disabled, but who cannot afford to pay for the medical or surgical attention they may need. In addition to these there are a great many of others—the transient sick, so to speak—who, though not entirely incapacitated, are nevertheless suffering in one way or another with ailments interfering with their comfort and work, which go utterly unattended unless some provision is made somewhere for them. This duty the Medical College has shouldered in a thoroughgoing fashion that leaves it no longer possible for a man, woman, or child in Richmond to suffer a day for lack of funds to meet doctor's bills or drug bills.

ALL RACES, CREEDS AND AGES ADMITTED FREE.

The dispensary occupies the entire lower floor of the college building. It is an essential part of the teaching equipment in that it is one of the chief means at the disposal of the school for furnishing practical experience to senior students in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases. It not only serves those who need it, most all races, creeds, and ages have equal right of entrance. The pickaninny with a splinter in his toe now knows that the dispensary is the place for him, just as does the hard-working but financially embarrassed white man or woman suffering, for instance, with a heart disease of long standing. Facilities are furnished to meet all conditions, even to the point of issuing prescriptions for eyeglasses. Minor surgical work is done on the spot. A staff of five nurses from the Memorial Hospital will be in daily attendance hereafter. Medical cases appropriate for the dispensary are properly diagnosed and treated and return from time to time for further attention. Not only is the prescription written and handed to a patient who may be too poor to have it filled, but it is immediately sent to the college pharmacy department and in a few minutes the drug itself returns and the patient leaves with both the advice and the remedy without having had to spend one cent. On the other hand cases that may be too serious for dispensary management are sent into either the City Hospital or the Memorial and occasions that a stranger in the dispensary was found to have some acute condition requiring heroic treatment which the college was able to get for him before it was too late.

In this connection the co-operation of the Instructive Visiting Nurses' Association with the dispensary has proven of great value. In July the visiting nurses saw in their homes thirty-six and in August, thirty-five new patients who were being treated in the dispensary. The fact that these were the hot months of the summer made no difference. There were no students to be benefited, but there were plenty of patients and the dispensary kept on with its work just as it does while the school session is in progress.

These 2 men should use HERPICIDE it saves the hair

HERPICIDE WILL SAVE IT! HERPICIDE WILL SAVE IT! TOO LATE FOR HERPICIDE!!!

THE STORY OF THREE BROTHERS (REPRODUCED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS)

Look at those three portraits again. They illustrate better than words can possibly do the principle of hair preservation, the principle upon which NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE is based and acts. This is the principle, "You can do your hair more good while the hair is there, than you can ever do after the hair is gone."

Ninety-nine per cent of the hair losses, with both men and women, are due to the contagion that causes dandruff. Whenever this invisible microbic growth is present, active hair destruction follows. If you are troubled with dandruff, depend upon it, the contagion is there, slowly but surely robbing the follicle of life and pushing out the hair. Unless drastic and vigorous measures are promptly adopted to eradicate it, that contagion is going to remain and persist in its hair destroying activity until every hair is gone.

The great mistake that many people make is that they never take any particular interest in their hair until it is gone and their heads are bare. Instead of using NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE while they have an abundance of hair that can be saved, they wait until the damage is done—until it is too late. Then realizing their condition, they begin to appreciate the blessing of a nice head of hair. A bottle of so-called hair restorer is procured and much time and energy expended in an endeavor to accomplish the impossible—misspent money, misdirected energy.

By starting in time, the intelligent and systematic use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE would have prevented all of this trouble, all this anxiety. HERPICIDE eradicates dandruff contagion and prevents the hair from falling out. It gives to the hair life, lustre and health. It prevents baldness. It stops itching of the scalp due to dandruff.
